BATTLE HOTLY CONTESTED ALL DAY

Both the Japs and Russians Lost Heavily--Tokio Rejoices in the Victory Thus Attained by Their Troops.

(Special by Scripps-McLellan.)

Tokio, Sept. 2.—The Japanese followed up the retreat of Kuropatkin from Liaoyang is officially announced here today. The Japanese secured a large number of cannon deserted by the Russians in Liaoyang and report that the Russian retreat across the Taitse river was in great disorder. The Japanese kept a continuous fire with cannon and sharpshooters and otherwise harassed the enemy. It is also reported that the city of Liaoyang is in flames. It is thought the fire was set by the Russians on their fleeing the city. There are large amounts of stores still in the city which the Russians were forced to leave behind. All the villages about Liaoyang have been ordered burned and four villages have already been destroyed. This has made several thousand Manchurians homeless and they are joining the Chun Chuses to wreak vengeance on the Russians. It is estimated that the Russian losses about Liaoyang since Tuesday will reach over ten thousand.

Field Marshal Oyama reports the battle yesterday as follows: "The enemy being unable to resist our fierce attack, began retreating Sept. 1 toward Liaoyang. Our left central divisions hotly pursued the enemy who were in great confusion and trying to retire to the right bank of the Taitse river. We captured ten half-centimeter cannon, which were used to bombard the Liaoyang railroad station. Our right flank attacked the station at Hsi Ying Tai, fifteen miles northeast of Liaoyang. Our casualties since Aug. 29th are ten thousand killed and wounded."

Official Information
St. Petersburg, Sept. 2.—Official information has reached here to the effect that General Kuropatkin has thrown the greater part of his troops upon the right bank of the Taitse river, where several divisions of the Japanese have effected a crossing. This move was made to check the Japanese progress upon the country lying between Liaoyang and Mukden. General Kuropatkin's flanking movement, begun on Wednesday, is to be nullified by an engagement on the right bank of the river. It is stated that

RICH MAN ASKS DOCTOR TO KILL HIS SPOUSEWealthy Manufacturer of Dayton, It Is Alleged, Desired to Marry a Pretty Working Girl.

Dayton, O., Sept. 2.—Frank Schaffer, a prominent and wealthy business man, is charged, arranged through the pretended connivance of the family physician to kill his wife. The police arrested the alleged would-be murderer.

Mr. Schaffer is 54 years old, the president of an envelope company, and formerly owned and managed several retail groceries. It is alleged his wish to wed a girl in the employ of the envelope company, and with whom Schaffer, it is said, is madly in love, bred a desire to get rid of his wife.

According to the police Dr. Charles A. Kiefer is the Schaffer family physician. Schaffer, they say, went to the doctor and proposed to give Dr. Kiefer $500 if he would poison or otherwise kill Schaffer's wife.

Dr. Kiefer pretended to agree to the bargain, but told another physician and also the police. They gave the woman a harmless dose of something and detectives were concealed to hear Schaffer's admissions.

Henry C. Fitch, colored, was hanged at Clearfield, Pa., for the murder of John Williamson on Sept. 29, 1903.

the number of Japanese now on that bank is so small that it will be a comparatively easy task for Kuropatkin's troops to annihilate them.

Following Store
Washington, D. C., Sept. 2.—The Japanese legation gave out the following dispatch from Tokio relative to the battle at Liaoyang:
"According to the telegram from the headquarters in the field, our army corps on the left took possession at dawn of Thursday, by fierce and daring assault of the heights which the enemy's right occupied. Thereupon all the enemy south of Liaoyang commenced a retreat. Our armies are now pursuing."

The following telegram was received at the legation just after the receipt of the above advice:
"The resume of the reports received up to the afternoon of the 31st is as follows:

"Since August 27 our armies are continuing operations toward Liaoyang. On the morning of the 29th the right and central columns of the first army occupied a position nine miles east of south of Liaoyang, on the left bank of the Taitse river. The armies which were advancing along the Hsien-Hsien-Liaoyang road, in joint operation with the left column of the first army, took on the 29th a position facing the enemy's line of defense, which extended to east and west from the point six miles south of Liaoyang. On the 30th severe fighting occurred on the whole day, and it was still continuing on the afternoon of the 31st. The enemy appeared to consist of twelve or thirteen divisions."

The Japanese secured twenty-seven thousand rifles about Liaoyang which the Russians threw away in their flight. Kuropatkin reports to St. Petersburg that the Japanese kept up a continuous fire all day yesterday and that the Russians were forced to fall back. General Nodzu, commanding the Japanese center, has telegraphed the war department that he was continuing to advance with the object of capturing the line from Shihshien to Liaoyang. This would effect a junction with the left wing, commanded by Gen. Oku.

CHILDREN TURN SWITCH
TO-SEE CARS BREAK UPLittle Tots Cause a Wreck on the Northwestern Road at Chicago and Warrants Are Issued.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—"Just to see the cars break up," Freddie Mueller, 10 years old, 509 George street, and Helen Schultz, 11 years old, 519 George street, are accused of having turned a switch on the Chicago & Northwestern railway and wrecking a freight train. William Jeffrey, detective for the company, procured warrants for the arrest of the children on a charge of malicious mischief.

With other juveniles in their neighborhood, the two children were playing on the railroad track. Somebody turned a switch and a freight train ran into it. Two cars were partly demolished, but more to warn children away from the tracks and prevent more serious accidents in the future, than to fix responsibility for the damage, the railroad company started an investigation.

A woman told the detectives that one of the children wore a red dress. Helen Schultz wore a red dress and drew the attention of Detective Jeffers. He questioned her and learned the truth.

"I didn't do it," she said. "It was Freddie. We were playing on the tracks when we saw a freight train switching. 'Look, Helen,' said Freddie to me. 'I'm going to turn this switch and see those cars bust up and then we can take the wood home for the stores.'"

"You'd better not," I told him, but he did anyway. Pretty soon the cars came along. When the cars reached the switch two cars were thrown off the track. Neither of the cars was broken very much."

Freddie told his story and denied that he had turned the switch.

Unrelenting Victims of Button Trust.
Why are there two buttons, or even one, on the sleeves of a coat? The writer took a census of his buttons and found that 63 of them were unnecessary. He is particularly anxious as to the two buttons behind on a frock coat. Taking a survey of the whole human family he finds that there are 800,000,000 buttons worn, all of them useless.—Philadelphia Ledger.

LIVE STOCK HANDLERS HAVE LEFT

Small Dealers Are Informed That They Will Not Be Supplied with Meat by the Independents
Until Further Notice.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Employees of the Chicago Junction railroad within the stock yards will not join in a sympathetic strike with the butcher workmen. The Switchmen's union held a meeting and unanimously decided to stay at work until ordered out by their executive officers. That means they will stay at work indefinitely, for their officers are opposed to a strike.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen did not call any meeting, but a telegram was sent to Grand Master P. H. Morrissey asking him to come here at once. He replied that W. G. Lee, first vice grand master, would arrive in Chicago to look after the situation, but there is no likelihood of the trainmen joining in the strike. They have no agreement with the Chicago Junction railroad, but, according to one of their local officers, they cannot see wherein they would benefit the butchers by going out on strike.

Wholesalers Out of Meat.
The supply of fresh meat at the Fulton market is almost exhausted, and the dealers admit that the situation will be critical within the next two days unless something unforeseen happens. This market supplies the most of the trade on the West Side of the city.

Hundreds of small retail dealers in the outlying parts of the city have been notified that they can get no more meat until the strike situation changes, and many of their refrigerators are now empty. The big packers scoff at the idea of a meat famine, and say they can easily supply the city, but they have not yet devised any plan by which they can deliver meat to retail dealers.

Handling the Stock.
There is said to be a great deal of discontent among the live stock handlers over the strike order which called them out. About fifteen men refused to join in the strike, and they were directing the nonunion men how to distribute consignments of stock. The stock handlers declare that they were not given an opportunity to vote.

Big Packers Are Pleased.
The big packers are pleased rather than otherwise at the latest strike developments. By shutting down the independent packers the firms against which the strike is being waged will get back the local trade they have lost during the strike. Already the wholesale houses of Libby, McNeill & Libby and Armour & Co., on South Water street, have been stocked up with meat, and they are preparing to do business again, despite the teamsters.

By the beginning of the week they expect to have all their wholesale markets full, but they have not yet devised a plan for distributing the meat to the retail stores. The teamsters are said, however, to be paying little attention to the strike, and are hauling meat from railroad tracks to the wholesale markets without protest.

the question of going on strike, and that is what has stirred up the discontent among them. An official of the Union Stock Yards and Trading company, said that there would be 500 nonunion stock handlers at work and that the company would be able to carry on business as usual within a few days.

Hits the Independents.
About 350 cars of live stock were shipped from the yards, and the big packers asserted they had no difficulty in getting stock, and that they did about their usual amount of killing.

The independent packers were, however, hit hard, and they made a vigorous protest to the strike leaders. They were informed by President Donnelly that they could have union butchers to kill stock if it could be procured outside the yards. Some of the independents think they can get stock direct from farms and unload it at some point outside the yards and thus keep on doing business. Others declare that such a plan is impracticable and admit that they will be forced to shut down, as, indeed, a number of them have already done.

Governor George W. Peck of Milwaukee, Lieutenant Governor, Marshallfield, Secretary of State, John Williams, Treasurer, Andrew Jensen, Edgerton, Attorney General, William T. Wolfe, La Crosse, Railroad Commissioner, Edward L. Hutton, Superior, Insurance Commissioner, Henry Feltzer, Sturgeon Bay.

George W. Peck of Milwaukee, former governor of Wisconsin, was nominated for governor by acclamation by the democratic convention at Oshkosh.

Dr. H. A. Lathrop of Marshallfield was chosen for the second place on the ticket, defeating Hurl Williams of Ashland by a vote of 322 to 248. The other nominations were made without incident.

Former Senator Vilas, addressing the convention, referred to Gov. La Follette as a "distributor of distress" and a "distresser."

His speech aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

Platform Scores Republicans

The platform of the national democratic convention at St. Louis and the nomination of Alton B. Parker for president and Henry C. Davis for vice president, for the creation of a public service corporation, and favors a law compelling railway companies to operate railroads in Wisconsin at a flat rate of 2 cents per mile. The primary election law passed by the last legislature is strongly opposed and the present state administration is roundly scored.

Two minority reports, one favoring the principle of primary elections and the other declaring for an elective rate commission with power to control, were turned down, the vote by which the majority report passed being 404 to 172. The contest was carried on by the big men of the convention and in the discussions bitter feeling and acrimony were manifested.

Vilas Leads Conservatives

Former Senator Vilas led the conservative elements represented in the convention, calling for the adoption of the majority report of the committee on resolutions. What has been termed the radical element was lined up on the other side.

The overwhelming defeat of the radicals was a surprise to the conservatives, who looked for a greater showing of strength. That former Senator Vilas contributed to this defeat by his effective speech is conceded. The adoption of the majority report and the ratification of the entire platform cleared the way for the nomination of the ticket.

JANESVILLE BOYS IN VAUDEVILLE

Hatch and McPherson Are Meeting With Success in Milwaukee This Week.

George Hatch of this city has been meeting with great success in Milwaukee this week with a vaudeville turn at the new Grand opera-house. He sings and plays his own accompaniment on the harp and the specialty has uniformly pleased the audience and called forth frequent encores. Mr. McPherson, a troupe member from Janesville, is also meeting with similar success in the entertainment line.

TRUANCY LAW IS ENFORCED HERE

Dan D. Bennett Proved an Efficient Officer Last Year, and Will Probably Be Reappointed.

While boards of education in every city of the state are required to appoint truancy officers to compel regular attendance of the children in school, this new law has been a dead letter in many instances. In Janesville, however, it has been enforced to the letter and it is safe to say that there are few other commonwealths where such a careful surveillance is kept as in this city. Dan D. Bennett proved to be an efficient officer last year and will probably be re-appointed.

THE POWER OF STEAM.

Many May See It Takes Genius to Realize.

When James Watt saw the steam causing the kettle lid to jump up and down he said "There must be power in steam that it can lift such a weight."

There was.

Millions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery.

Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandur, Falling Hair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which eats the life from the roots of human hair. Newcomb's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores the hair to its natural state.

MINOR PICKED TO BE SLAUGHTERED

No Love Lost Between Administration and Green Bay Congressman—State Treasury Deal.

From Green Bay comes the story that the La Follette men are taking a great deal of interest in the democratic congressional convention of the ninth district, which will meet at Green Bay Sept. 14 to nominate an opponent to Congressman Minor. Next to Congressman Babcock the administration men would like to see Congressman Minor defeated. In order to be sure of accomplishing this they are reported to have offered to turn over the La Follette vote in the district to the democratic nominee, if he is the one selected by them.

Three candidates are mentioned for the nomination—R. J. McGeehan of De Pere, Philip Sheridan of Appleton, and Humphrey Pierce of Appleton. Mr. Sheridan is the one favored by the friends of the governor. The indications, however, point to the nomination of Mr. McGeehan.

Kemp's Angle Grows

Now that State Treasurer Kemp has secured a commission from the supreme court to bring suit against Governor La Follette in that court to prevent being ousted, the state treasury case seems more complicated than ever. This new move may result in making the state depositories even more cautious in paying over the money in their charge. Some of the banks already have called on their counsel for opinions as to the question of whose orders are to be obeyed in the matter of recognition of drafts.

An Answer

Governor La Follette has sent to the banks here in which state funds are deposited formal notice to send to the state treasurer at Madison certificates of deposit of the funds in their possession. The Germania National bank of Milwaukee will not send the certificate until the supreme court decides who is state treasurer. The German-American bank of the same place says it will forward the certificate, but will not say that it will pay any drafts of Purcell, the treasurer appointed by Governor La Follette. The Milwaukee National will await the advice of its counsel before doing anything.

BEASLEYES ARE IN COURT AGAIN

Rockford Couple Who Have Had Numerous Law Suits Over a Fortune, in a Tangle.

Once more the Beasley romance, which aroused Beloit and Rockford to a pitch a few weeks ago, has come into prominence. John Beasley was formerly a farmer living near Beloit and a poor man in the eyes of the public. Recently it was discovered that he had forty thousand dollars concealed in his house. Then his wife filed a suit in court for divorce and the exposure came. A settlement was made between Beasley and his wife, certain negotiable paper was transferred to Mrs. Beasley and Beasley was allowed to leave the courthouse at Rockford in an automobile and depart to regions unknown. Meanwhile his creditors of seven years ago began investigating. Beasley left Beloit mysteriously about that time and went to England. A short time before his family trouble he returned but supposedly a bankrupt. Now comes the sequel. Mr. and Mrs. Beasley made up and as a return for his kindness in taking his wife back again he endeavored to persuade her to turn over to him the ten thousand dollars worth of negotiable security he had settled upon her and then leave for England. It took police officers to get back the valuable papers and now the Beasleys are at it again. This time for good.

DITCH PROJECT IS AT A STANDSTILL

Some of the Farmers in the District To Be Benefited, Refuse to Pay Their Share of Cost.

Some of the farmers residing west of the city in the district that will be drained by the proposed ditch are said to have refused to pay their share of the expense and the project may never be realized. Contracting firms who submitted estimates on the work have heard nothing regarding the opening of the bids and the matter seems to be at a standstill. The cost of constructing the ditch would have aggregated several thousand dollars and it was calculated to drain many acres of lowlands that are now of little value.

University Celebration.

The University of Freiburg had a grand celebration recently—processions, fireworks, illuminations, addresses, the occasion being the rounding out of the number of students to 2,000. One of the speakers referred to the fact that the number 1,000 was reached in 1885, and he was much applauded when he pointed at a babe in the arms of a nurse as the future four-thousandth student.

Day in Janesville.

RACE MEETING ON BELOIT TRACKS

October Will Be the Time When the Runners Will Race for Two Days at Least.

A two days running meet to be held on the track of the Beloit fair grounds early in October, after the neighboring fairs are all over, is quickly being planned by the officers of the Beloit Interstate Fair and Driving association.

"The matter is still in an unsettled condition," said an officer of the association to a newspaper representative yesterday, "but we hope to be able to carry the project through successfully. It will be necessary, however, to secure the hearty co-operation of all those interested in this kind of sport, as well as the support of the general public. We have had some good racing in the past and if we arrange this meeting at the close of the fair circuit we ought to have no difficulty in drawing a number of good horses here for the races."

There has been considerable talk in Beloit in favor of running races and it is quite probable that if the association concludes to hold the meet in October it will have the hearty support of a large majority of the people.

RUSSIAN THISTLES QUITE NUMEROUS

Colony of Them Found Near Galbraith Stables—Prof. Mayne's Description.

A small colony of the comparatively new pest, the Russian thistle or cactus—otherwise known as the saltwort, Tartar or Hector weed—has been discovered in the vicinity of the Galbraith barns on East Milwaukee street. A full and interesting description of the plant is given in D. D. Mayne's new book on "Agriculture." The Russian thistle, says the author, is an annual plant, coming each year from the seed. It grows from a single, small, light-colored root less than a half inch through and from six to twelve inches in length, to the height of from six to three feet, branching profusely, and, when not crowded, often forms a dense, bush-like plant from two to six feet in width, and from one-half to two-thirds as high. When young it is a very harmless looking plant, tender and juicy throughout, with small narrow, downy, green leaves.

When dry weather comes in August the tender, downy leaves wither and fall, and the plant increases rapidly in size, sending out hard stiff branches. Instead of leaves, these branches bear at intervals of half an inch or less, three sharp spines which harden but do not grow dull, as the plant increases in size and ugliness. The spines are from a quarter to a half inch in length. At the base of each cluster is a papery flower about one eighth of an inch in width. If this be taken out and carefully pulled to pieces, a small, pulpy, green body, covered up and appearing like a tiny green small shell, will be found. This is the seed.

At the earliest frost, the plants change color from dark green to crimson, especially on the most exposed parts. When the ground becomes frozen and the November winds blow across the prairie, the small root is broken or loosened and pulled out. The dense, yet light growth, and the circular or hemispherical form of the plant, fit it most perfectly to be carried by the wind. It goes rolling across the country at racing speed, scattering seeds at every bound.

The best method of destroying Russian thistles is by plowing in August or September, before they have grown large and stiff and before they have gone to seed and by burning over the stubble fields as soon as possible after harvest. Sheep are very fond of the Russian thistle before it becomes too coarse and woody. The young plants may therefore be kept down by pasturing sheep on them. If the thistle is to be kept out of cultivated fields, it must be got rid of along roadsides, railroad grades, waste-land where the soil has been broken, and all places where it may have by chance obtained a foothold.

...Forty Years Ago...

Janesville Daily Gazette, Friday, September 2, 1864.—Complimentary.—The Stoughton Reporter has the following very handsome notice of our candidate for senator in this county: Hon. W. A. Lawrence has been re-nominated for senator from Rock county unanimously. The Union men of Rock have but done justice to themselves and a faithful and able representative of the people in re-nominating a man who has acted with so much credit to himself and the people he represents. Mr. Lawrence, like Mr. Chandler, of Dane, is an upright, unassuming man, of unquestionable integrity, and a useful member of the legislature. Let the people of Rock show their appreciation of him with an increasing majority.

Congregational Church.—It is proposed to open the Congregational church for public service on Sunday next. It has been closed for a few weeks during vacation of the pastor and to undergo some renovation.

There is a possibility that no preacher will be secured to fill the desk, but it is confidently expected that one will be obtained.

A Call.—We understand that the Rev. Mr. Kinney, of the Congregational church of this city has received a call from a church at Rockford, Ill., but has not as yet concluded to accept the call. He is a gentleman of conceded ability, greatly beloved by his people, and his loss would be a serious one to the community of this city.

And Still They Go.—Another squad of seventy men were sent forward to Madison today. Fine, hale looking men they were, and will do good service in the battle for liberty.

Convalescent.—The many friends of Mr. Daniel Wilcox will be pleased to learn that he is rapidly recovering from his recent dangerous illness. We hope to see him on the streets again before many days.

Coming Attractions.

Mr. John C. Fisher, who introduced the idea of special trains in all movements of his big musical comedy companies—an innovation that was absolutely necessary in view of the number of players and quantity of equipment used—is pursuing the same plan with his big "San Toy" company. In every railroad arrangement which Mr. Fisher's representa-

E. J. Carpenter's big production, "A Little Outcast," which has broken all records the last two years, begins its third season at the Myers Grand Opera House next Monday with Dolly Dupree in the stellar role, assisted by Millicent Evans and a big company. The production has been enlarged and a new act written, and many surprises will be seen in the stage effects. An electric launch is a novel feature.

The most novel scene ever presented on the American stage will be seen here the coming season in E. J. Carpenter's "A Little Outcast." The curtain rises on a magnificent night view of the docks of the battery, with the illuminated buildings in the background, and an obstruct-

THE HOG FOR THE FARMER

It's the Kind That Grows Well and Can Be Made Ready for Market Quickly.

Says a swine grower: The general purpose hog of the day is the early-to-market kind. Be he white, black or red, lop-eared or stiff-eared, the farmers of this country will demand the early-maturing kind. He will consume our corn and remain the corn-belt hog without, but the signs of the times point to the modification of the present corn-belt type.

He is found in most of the corn-belt breeds to a greater or lesser degree, and a man need not leave the breed to which he is attached to find his ideal. Each breeder of pure breeds may think he has the type closest to the general purpose hog. He has that right. However, if he does not do all in his power to keep close to that type, the farmers will forcibly remind him of his failure in a way that will affect his pocket book, by purchasing their new brood elsewhere.

Technically speaking, he is at present wide and short of head, deep of heart and sides, broad of back, with a soft coat, and just enough bone to carry him to market. The tendency to excessive bone has not always been found conducive to easy feeding, early maturing qualities.

Enough is enough. His disposition must be quiet. He must ever be ready to make friends with his master, and his general character should indicate the easy feeder.

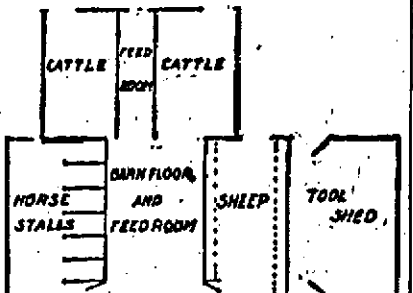

He should be practically fat and ready for market at any period of his life, and finish at nine months old, when he should weigh a high mark to shoot at. Why do we want the early-maturing kind? Because the first part of a hog's life is the period of rapid growth.

Prof. Henry shows, in his "Feeds and Feeding," that a pig gains 75 per cent. of growth the first week of life, but gradually drops in its per cent. of gain till say, the tenth week, when it makes but 21 per cent. per week.

A SUGGESTION FROM OHIO.

Storing Straw from Machine Under Cover is a Practice That Seems to Pay Quite Well.

Having experienced some of the conveniences and inconveniences of storing straw both in open yards and under cover possibly the experience may be of benefit to others. Needing additional stabling for cattle, I thought it would be cheaper and more convenient to construct the straw mow in connection with cattle barn. The barn proper is 62 feet long with threshing floor and feed room running cross-wise. The diagram herewith will give a fairly clear idea of the location of the addition containing the cattle below and the straw above. Experiences thus far shows that I could not locate it more satisfactorily. The straw is thrown down into the feed room in the barn very convenient to cattle, horses or sheep. It is then thrown into the different mangers where the stock may eat what they desire, and what they leave is used for bedding. We know the inconvenience of bringing straw from a stack in the yard when frozen, and on windy days, especially in March or April, when we desire dry straw for bedding the new arrivals in flock and herd and when we find the straw stacked in the yard to be low or entirely worked down.

Filling the mow at threshing time is not nearly so hard as some might suppose. I go into the mow myself and hence know whereof I speak. With the blower or wind-stacker (we now have no other) we can place it almost in any portion of the mow. By using truss rods and braces we have no inside timber at all in the straw mow to interfere in any way. Let the man who is manipulating the stacker and who usually stands on the rear of the machine take his place at the end of the stacker where it enters the mow and then he can see clearly at all times just where you want the straw and the man in the mow need only to level and tramp. Storing my oat straw saved the outlay of dollars this spring in the purchase of high-priced hay, as I fed my entire oat straw crop with profit. Where it is at all possible give some attention to the matter of storing straw under cover and easy of access at all times and, my word for it, you will never regret it.—C. R. Wagner, in Ohio Farmer.

Barley as Food for Stock. Barley is not extensively grown, yet it is a superior stock food and will grow on soils that will not produce wheat. In England hogs are fattened on barley, and the meat contains more lean than that produced from corn. In feeding pigs as a test barley gave better results than corn, a pound of growth being secured from three and a half pounds of barley, at a cost of two cents per pound, which was better than from any other food. Pigs, however, grow more rapidly than adult hogs. Ground grains proved superior to the unground. In steer feeding both corn and wheat surpassed barley, and with lambs the results were about the same with corn, wheat and barley. Corn and barley mixed gave better results than either alone in some cases. These facts should make barley a favorite where it is not now grown at all.

Making the Face Expressive.

Generally speaking, what may be termed the mechanism of the face is the same in all of us, and the facial muscles are as susceptible of training as the muscles of the arms and legs. We can educate them to a considerable extent—as actors commonly do, without thinking of the problem from an anatomical standpoint—and thus may render our faces more expressive and proportionately more interesting.

VERDICT OF THE PARTY

From the report of the Committee on Credentials to the REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION, which was unanimously adopted by the convention, June 22, 1904.

Your committee report it to be their final judgment that the convention which elected said John C. Spooner, J. V. Quarles, J. W. Babcock and Emil Hanson as delegates at large, and their alternates at large, to this convention from the state of Wisconsin WAS THE REGULAR CONVENTION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN WISCONSIN, and that the delegates elected by it are the regular elected delegates at large from the state of Wisconsin to the republican convention, and, as such, are entitled to seats in this convention.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON.

August, the "Midnight Month" of 1904 has passed into history. As a general thing vacations are a thing of the past. The lethargy which has dominated trade in general is now to be thrown off and business is to resume its normal fall impetus.

The summer has been so very cool that it has hardly been noticed in the passing. But it has passed and the sleepy drone of the heated term is no longer to be heard.

During the summer there has, however, been a general preparation amongst the merchants of Janesville to take care of a large fall trade.

Many merchants have enlarged their quarters, have expanded their usefulness and are now, on the threshold of the fall season, ready to take better care of their trade than ever before.

Too, there are new faces to be seen, there are new names over doors of houses and new blood is infused into the commercial atmosphere.

Let us hope that it is good blood, flowing through the veins of stalwart, upright, progressive men who will assimilate with the older inhabitants and, putting their shoulder to the wheel, help push our city to a larger and greater usefulness.

One of the paramount considerations for the merchant to think of is how to outline his business campaign and the most important thing is the advertising.

New blood will, naturally, be filled with new ideas and a knowledge gained in a different sphere of business activity.

Men who have broadened their knowledge, who have kept abreast with up-to-date merchandising, with the rules and ins and outs of business as practiced at the large trade centers, will have ideas different from those of the older and sterner established merchants.

These ideas will be worked out. They will be tried in comparison with home ideas and will, in a measure, prove of great benefit to those who use them as well as to those who learn from observation.

But there is one great and growing evil which must be met and overcome by the merchants of Janesville if they will get the full benefit from this trade.

That is the rapidly increasing tendency to either go to Chicago to buy goods or to patronize the mail order houses of that city.

It is safe to say that enough money goes to Chicago daily to pay the running expenses of this city. And this money might just as well be kept at home if the proper tactics were pursued to do so.

The reason it goes to Chicago is that Chicago advertises for it. They are persistent in their requests for trade, they are incessant in offering inducements for people to come to the city to spend their money. A realization of the advertising teaches one that they do not offer any greater value but they persistently call to every one's mind the things they have to sell and the prices they are selling them for.

The local merchants may have the same thing to sell and at the same or even a lower price but, if the buyer does not know it, and is not kept constantly reminded of it, they will ignore the man who helps pay the taxes and go to the city.

These are facts and they are well worthy of consideration.

The conditions must be met and overcome. Are you willing to do your part in overcoming it?

NOT REPUBLICAN

It is a queer brand of republicanism that travels over the state forming alliances with democrats to satisfy a personal grievance, and yet this is what the governor of Wisconsin is doing by proxy, every day in the week. "Anything to beat Grant," is the watchword. Just why intelligent men should lend themselves to this kind of work is a question not easily answered.

In the third congressional district every effort was made to defeat the nomination of Mr. Babcock, and now a campaign is being organized to defeat him at the polls. Similar tactics are being used in other districts, and yet the men engaged in this class of work claim to be republicans.

Why should Congressman Babcock be defeated? His record in congress is clean and he is recognized as one of the most able representatives in the lower house.

What has the state to gain by turning out this kind of a man and putting a man like Grothorff, or some other democrat in his place. It would mean a loss to the state and a calamity to the republican party.

Who is demanding this change and what is the motive behind the movement? It all originated in the brain of one man, and the motive is a simple desire to gratify personal spite.

If there is anything commendable, or worthy of endorsement about this sort of vengeance, it is not easily discovered. Suppose the house of congress was so close that Mr. Babcock's vote was necessary to save the republican majority, think you that the man who is after his scalp would stop for a moment to consider results? Not at all. He possesses the disposition of an Indian and never forgives or forgets.

Friends, foes or party are sacrificed in a mad ambition for conquest. It is argued that the governor stands for principles which are vital to the welfare of the party. It might be added that he stands for revenge that brooks neither compromise nor toleration.

The republicans of Wisconsin should think twice and think seriously before deserting the party and casting in their lot with a man who has nothing to lose in trading the party which has honored him with high office.

Loyalty means something and it never meant more to the republicans of the state than it means today. The supreme court may decide which faction is legally right, but the court of individual responsibility can settle some questions in advance of this decision. The man who deliberately plans to forward his own interests at the expense of the national party, is not a safe man, to follow. It is time to call a halt and size up the situation without prejudice or malice.

THE OUTLOOK.
If there is any criticism to offer concerning the national campaign, from a republican standpoint, it is along the line of lethargy, produced by over-confidence. Republicans generally take it for granted that Roosevelt will be elected by an overwhelming majority and there is a disposition, all along the line, to settle back and do nothing.

While confidence is a good thing to possess, it is well to remember that votes count, and that democracy is not asleep this year.

The democratic party comes nearer being a unit today than at any time during the past eight years. The conservative element of the party is in control, and Bryan and his following, while not entirely happy, are in line.

The party vote will be larger than it was four years ago, and while this does not mean success for the head of the ticket, it does mean danger in close congressional districts.

This fact is fully appreciated by the national and congressional committees. Mr. Babcock of Wisconsin is being criticised for expressing his opinion freely on this subject, but it should be remembered that he is in position to know what he is talking about.

Wisconsin is not the only state where the republican party is weakened by factional strife and democracy will not be slow in taking advantage of the situation. What is needed on the part of republicans is more interest in party success.

Defeat is possible and it behooves every man to work as though he thought it probable.

There is no pronounced national issue, but there are many conditions that will influence votes. Labor is restless and much of it unemployed. Combined capital is not satisfied, while the doctrine of socialism is sweeping over the country like a tidal wave.

These conditions all contribute to the campaign an element of uncertainty and it stands the republican party in hand to be watchful and loyal.

Under any other administration, the case of State Treasurer Kempf would be dramatic, but there have been so many startling disclosures at the capitol during the past year that nothing is exciting. When Mr. Kempf finally discovers that he is out and injured he will doubtless be ready to make some developments but they will fall flat because he has waited too long.

It is a little amusing to note what can be done with Commissioner Wright's figures in attempting to prove that the cost of living has increased. There has been no advance in the price of beer, and yet there is more money spent for beer than bread. The luxuries of life clear up the profits and yet people wonder why they don't get rich.

The tragic death of E. C. Johnson demonstrates the influence of mind over matter. The mental strain to which he had long been subjected proved too much, and nature was tested beyond the power of endurance. The infirmities of life are not all physical and no load is so heavy as the load of care.

There are plenty of republicans in the state who are waiting quietly for the decision of the supreme court on the factional contest. There is a smaller class who have declared their intention of staying by their friend the governor, regardless of the decision. The majority have some respect for law.

The democratic party hopes to defeat Senator Whitehead and is counting on the support of La Follette followers. It is a forlorn hope and the governor and his allies will be disappointed.

The state recently paid out $30,000 for the support of day schools for the deaf. This is a waste of money. The state school at Delavan furnishes the only practical education for the deaf.

The democratic love feast at Oshkosh is suggestive of the fact that the party is still inspired with hope.

Mr. Bryan and Governor La Follette hope to join hands in redeeming the nation four years from now.

The old republican state central committee seems to have more lives than a cat.

PRESS COMMENT

Madison Journal: Hurley is bad enough in all conscience, but it will not help the place to drag it into La Follette politics.

Marquette Eagle-Star: The sultan of Turkey shares the democratic fear of President Roosevelt's impulsiveness.

Oshkosh Northwestern: The people who are staying in summer cottages are beginning to think of getting back where they can start up the fires and keep warm.

Scranton Tribune: The democratic editors should caucus to decide just what Parker's doctrines really are. No two of them seem to agree.

Superior Telegram: Russia is buying more ships, probably on the principle that there's always room on the bottom.

Oshkosh Times: It is the duty of the coal barons to see that their product is not left lagging in the rear by wheat and beef.

Racine Journal: So far nothing has been received from George W. Peck to indicate he will not accept a nomination from his party for governor. There is no false modesty being wasted.

Sheboygan Journal: Some small boys at Janesville burned up a $1,000 barn while blacking their faces with burnt cork. If a negro boy had caused the fire while trying to look like a white man, there would have been a race riot.

Chicago Chronicle: That $100,000 which Mr. Taggart proposes to spend in Illinois will not help the judge much, but it will be highly appreciated by our local democratic statesmen with a hard winter coming on.

Menasha Record: The governor is to speak at Oshkosh on Labor day. If he is polite he will eschew politics for he is to be the city's guest and it is never polite for a guest to talk shop.

Milwaukee Journal: A professor of the university of Chicago has written a magazine article defending the Igorrotes for eating dogs. Pretty soon the magazines will be printing articles by men defending the U. of C. professors.

Racine News: Postmaster General Payne expects next year to get two-cent postage from America to Europe. And when will he go in for a parcels post, such as they have in England, Germany, and all civilized countries?

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: Labor day is no time for speeches of an inflammatory character. The wise speaker is the one who speaks to the service to his audience and that service is best rendered on such an occasion by counselling moderation. The time is one when conservatism should prevail.

Exchange: A Texas editor has hit the right spot when he says: "The sorriest fellow on the earth is the fellow who will sit around and cuss his own town. If I lived astride the north pole, I would call it home and be ready to boost it up. If I couldn't say anything nice about it, I would say that my ice bill didn't come high. I would not stay in a town I had to cuss—not while the world is as big as it is now."

Sheboygan Journal: The change in studies at the Sheboygan high school, largely increasing the number of studies that students may choose for themselves, is in the trend of educational work everywhere. There seems to be an increased reluctance on the part of teachers to force unwelcome knowledge into their pupils' heads. By allowing the latter to pursue those studies especially attractive to them, they are far more likely to uncover special talents in pupils' minds, than they are to afford "snaps" to the lazy.

Chicago Tribune: Is there a strike? Too bad! The golden rule would have prevented it. Is there a war? How unfortunate! It need never have happened if everybody had been doing to everybody else what he would like everybody to do to him. Follow the golden rule. There will be no more strife. This is what comes from many pupils every Sunday morning. It is also what comes from many platforms every week day evening. It misleads. It prescribes a remedy that does not cure. It nourishes unbelief. The golden rule is an amiable maxim of divine origin. If it is kept warm in a man's heart it will make him much better. But it will not prevent him from thinking that he is right and his neighbor wrong. It will not prevent him from thinking that he is treating his neighbor as he would have his neighbors treat him when as a matter of fact he is doing the exactly opposite thing. To remove strife you must remove ignorance and misunderstanding. You must introduce omniscience. The golden rule plus omniscience would solve everything. The golden rule alone, even if it were adopted in all the details of daily life by every inhabitant of this planet, would still leave us with strikes and wars. And the New Testament, except when some portion of it is wrenched from its context, does not teach otherwise.

QUEER FREAKS OF LIGHTNING

WILBUR CARLE'S HOME, AND A TREE NEAR JAIL STRUCK.

O. D. LINCOLN BADLY SHOCKED

Electric Currents Entered Open Windows and Tossed with Metal

Trimings on Bureaus.

Lightning was in one of its most freakish moods during the severe electrical storm that seemed to reach its culmination in and about Janesville last night. Over a score of people were stunned and dazed by the electrical currents which seemed to enter open windows and play about metal instruments on bureaus and chiffoniers, enveloping them in a gleaming fire of blue which emitted harsh, crackling noises.

Carl Heme Struck

A series of loud reports about half past ten o'clock caused Mrs. Wilbur F. Carle to go to the dining room with the idea of looking out of the window to see if anything in the neighborhood had been struck. As she stood in the doorway, a ball of fire seemed to crash through the south-west corner of the room, followed by a terrific report, the sounds of riven timbers, and the clattering noise of falling plaster. The room was filled with sulphurous fumes and the members of the household hastened to ascertain whether or not the house was on fire. No trace of a blaze could be found after a careful search. Strangely enough Mrs. Carle and none of the other members of the household received anything resembling a shock.

The Bolt Hit Low

The Carle residence is located at 153 North Jackson street and has a veranda on the ship which opens out on Race street. Near the southwest corner of the building and about five feet above the ground there is an iron ring to which is attached two wire clothes-lines stretching to the fence only a few yards away. The bolt appears to have struck the house near the wing, the wood being considerably charred at that particular point, and there only. The timbers were split their entire length to the roof and a strip of plaster about two feet wide, on the inside, was hurled from the lath.

County Jail Visited

At the same time in the evening a bolt struck the large maple tree a few feet from the north side of the county jail and ripped off some bark. Only a fortnight or so ago the building was visited by a bolt which ripped some of the slat shingles off the tower. The latter damage is just being repaired. Altogether, between the bad men and the elements, the handsome county bastille seems to be getting the worst of it.

O. D. Lincoln Shocked

O. D. Lincoln received such a severe shock while in bed at his home 127 Madison street, at about twenty minutes to eleven that he will be unable to attend to his business again for a day or two. His sleeping chamber is located in the south portion of the house, and the two west windows were open. He had just retired and was dozing off into slumber when he suddenly received a terrific blow on the right temple and cheek, followed by the sensation of a thousand needles driven into his body. The cry uttered caused the family to also beddle, and a few moments later Dr. Merritt was summoned. The effect of the shock had not worn off this morning, the victim still being in a languid and nervous state. Absolute rest for a day or two will be necessary before he will be able to leave the house.

Others Were Affected

Nearly every member of the family of P. S. Fenton who resides next door, at 125 Madison street, were more or less shocked by the electricity with which the air seemed to be permeated, but none were seriously affected. The Carle home seems to be the only place where the lightning struck in that neighborhood. Residents on South Wisconsin street and various other parts of the city were similarly affected.

LEAP YEAR PARTY AT CENTRAL HALL

About Fifty Janesville Young Ladies Furnished Carriages and Flowers Last Night.

Central hall was the scene of an enjoyable dancing party last evening. About fifty Janesville young ladies were the hostesses, the affair being on the leap year order. The committee in charge of the arrangements, consisting of the Misses Mattie Heller, Margaret Brennan, and Mable Wilson, had tastefully decorated the hall with potted plants and cut flowers, and rugs and easy chairs made the scene an inviting and alluring one. Smith & Kniff's full orchestra furnished the music and between dances Prof. Thiele rendered several piano selections that were received with favor. "Home, Sweet Home" was played at one o'clock.

A HUNDRED FROM THIS CITY

And an Equal Number From Beloit and Madison Will Leave Over St. Paul Sunday.

Sunday morning at half-past seven o'clock the Foresters' drill team of Florence Camp No. 365, Modern Woodmen of America, and from sixty to eighty other Janesville members of the order and excursionists will board the special coaches at the St. Paul depot that are to take them to St. Louis. The same train will carry the Madison drill team and excursionists and one of the Beloit teams. The Rockford team and the second team from Beloit will be met at St. Louis.

Drill on Tuesday

The big competitive drill for prizes between the various Woodmen battalions takes place on the St. Louis exposition grounds next Tuesday. Madison, Janesville, Beloit, and Rockford teams of twenty members each compose one of the battalions that will strive to capture the verdict of the judges. C. E. Reynolds of Beloit is major of this battalion; Charles Felt of Madison adjutant; and Sherman Fisher of Janesville, sergeant major.

Tents to Be Provided

The world's fair management has agreed to furnish tents and cots for the drill team members and meals at twenty-five cents for all the men in uniform. Traveling over the Chicago & Alton the local delegation will reach St. Louis at 6:30 Sunday evening. The round trip will cost members and all others who wish to go $5, and the tickets will be good to Chicago not later than twelve o'clock Monday evening, Sept. 12. There will be seventy-five or a hundred from this city who will make the trip. 125 from Beloit, and about 100 from Madison.

At Chicago the delegations from Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, and Milwaukee, and the drill teams constituting a rival battalion, will be met and will travel to St. Louis with the local Woodmen.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES

Look Precautions: Preparations made in anticipation of a terrific electrical and wind storm which struck Iowa City last night, prevented loss of life at Barium & Bailey's circus. The management refused to allow any of the waiting crowd into the tents and removed all the animals from the menagerie. This work had just been completed when the storm struck. The tent was torn from its fastenings and blown down. The canvas took fire from the gasoline lamps, and several workmen were burned in putting the fire out. The cages in which the animals had been were overturned and shattered. The loss is placed at $4,000.

Gets Milton Contract: The firm of Blair & Summers of this city were the lowest bidders for the carpenter work on the addition to the Milton school building when the bids were opened yesterday. P. E. Green bid for the plumbing work and was also the lowest.

Fair Sex to Grace Parade: Labor day is not wholly a man's holiday; the women also rightfully join in the festivities. Among the features of the parade will be the young ladies of the Boot and Shoeworkers' union and the members of the Women's Union Label league.

Prairie Chickens Not Numerous: The mighty hunters who opened the legal hunting season yesterday found but little game. Now is the prairie chicken season, but the numbers who frequent the haunts of the desired birds came home with but few chickens.

More Dogs for the Dog Catcher: The dog catcher has several new dogs in the city pound, which are waiting anxiously for someone to come and bail them out.

Fountains Stopped: The fountain in the Courthouse park is not in operation and has not been since the last band concert when a leak was discovered.

Not Inhabited: Despite the fact that the city generously donated houses for the few squirrels who live in the Courthouse park, they are not inhabited. Perhaps the little round entrance is so placed they fear a trap if they enter or the doorway is placed that it is not accessible from the tree, it is not known, but the houses are still uninhabited.

No Danger Signals: A well-known citizen of Janesville said yesterday while speaking of the construction of the new Court street bridge: "Of course, the street had to be closed to all but pedestrians, but I notice there is not a single red light at night as a danger signal to people from out of the city who are not acquainted with the fact that the thoroughfare is closed and the side-walk which is used by a large number of people is partially blocked in several places and should a person pass there on a dark night he could easily fall in the river should he trip or tumble over the timbers which block the walk."

Earrings Indicate Nativity: The earrings worn by Italian organ-grinding women indicate the part of Italy the wearers come from. The longer the earrings the farther south the original homes of the women. In the far north the ornaments are quite short.

Develop Canadian Coal Fields: Large expenditures are being made by the Canadian Pacific at Banff, according to report, to develop the anthracite coal fields discovered at that point.

PROMINENCE FOR FORMER RESIDENT

W. B. Jerome is Western Passenger Agent for the New York Central Lines.

Milwaukee papers are full of the reception given yesterday afternoon in the Cream city by W. B. Jerome, western passenger agent for the New York Central lines. Mr. Jerome is a former Janesville resident and his rapid rise in railway circles is due to his own work. The following is clipped from a Milwaukee paper:

W. B. Jerome, western passenger agent for the New York Central lines, yesterday formally opened the system's new Milwaukee office, Broadway and Wisconsin street, with an informal reception. More than 800 people called at the new office during the day.

Officials of the lines represented at the new Milwaukee headquarters were in the city to assist Mr. Jerome at the reception. Among those who were present were C. F. Daly, chief assistant general passenger agent of the Lake Shore, Chicago; L. D. Henson, general western passenger agent of the Michigan Central, Chicago; W. L. Pitchers Get Most Attention

Importance of Twirlers Makes Them Always Subject For Comment. Winning Boxmen of the Year—Interesting Talk of the Game.

Good pitching has become such an important factor in winning ball games that more attention is given to the doings of the men who occupy "the box" than to all the other players on the diamond. This season has been unusually prolific in the supply of "star" men in the big leagues.

In the National league Chicago's pitchers are doing so much better than had been anticipated that some are inclined to look upon them as one of one of the Brooklyn or Philadelphia boasts of winning half of his games. Mathewson has the honor of having won more games than any other pitcher in the league. His record up to the middle of the season was twenty-one wins and seven losses, while McGillicuddy had nineteen wins and four losses. Charley Nichols was third in wins with thirteen. Flaherty in his eight victories has blanked his opponents four times, a percentage of .500, a most wonderful record.

Comiskey annexed a pitcher by the name of Smith last spring, and Smith is holding up the reputation of the family admirably. He was leading the American league to all intents and purposes, and Griffith was a good second.

Dineen of the Boston Americans, who was on the hospital list, held the same place he did a short time ago, while Chesbro was close after him, with twenty victories and six defeats, giving him the splendid percentage of .760. Cy Young climbed up the list and had a standing of .700, having won fourteen out of twenty games, while Powell was also well up, with thirteen victories out of nineteen games.

It is a noticeable fact that all of Boston's pitchers stood over the .500 mark, Gibson being the bottom man. All of New York's regular twirlers, with the exception of Hughes, are above the same mark. The Athletics have one

His record up to the middle of the season was twenty-one wins and seven losses, while McGillicuddy had nineteen wins and four losses. Charley Nichols was third in wins with thirteen. Flaherty in his eight victories has blanked his opponents four times, a percentage of .500, a most wonderful record.

Comiskey annexed a pitcher by the name of Smith last spring, and Smith is holding up the reputation of the family admirably. He was leading the American league to all intents and purposes, and Griffith was a good second.

Dineen of the Boston Americans, who was on the hospital list, held the same place he did a short time ago, while Chesbro was close after him, with twenty victories and six defeats, giving him the splendid percentage of .760. LITTLE FRANCE

A ROMANCE OF THE DAYS WHEN "THE GREAT LORD HAWKE" WAS KING OF THE SEA

CHAPTER IX.

THE GENERAL'S HEART.

FIVE years had elapsed since Philip Grafton left the tower of the old French castle, a thousand leagues of ocean now divided him from the old French tower; five years filled with high endeavor and honorable enterprise. He had risen to the rank of post-captain some years since and had been successfully engaged in his profession in many campaigns. His father had died meanwhile and he was alone in the world. To no woman among the many who had looked love in his eyes had he given his affection, and his friends regarded him as a confirmed bachelor. Was he still dreaming of Anne? It is enough to say he had not forgotten her—perhaps that is all.

It was evening on the 12th of September, 1759, a clear though moonless night. The wind fell as the sun set, and the ships slowly drifted up the river with the heavy flood-tide. On the shore to the left lay the camp of Bougainville. The white tents of the soldiers on the heights of Cap-Rouge could be dimly detected in the soft illumination from the irradiating stars overhead. Lights twinkled here and there on the crests of the bluffs, showing that, as usual, the French were on the alert and watchful.

There was much unwonted but subdued bustle on the English fleet as well. Men were being paraded and mustered on the decks, arms and equipments looked to, ammunition pouches filled to repletion, and the haversacks and canteens of the men provided with food and water, for it was hardly known when and where they would get anything to eat after they left the ships.

Far down the river the distant lights on Cape Diamond were almost hidden in clouds of smoke, and the muffled yet continuous roaring of the heavy guns from Admiral Saunders' ships of the line and the batteries at Point Lévis, with the answer of the French from the works at Beauport and the citadel of Quebec, told a tale of furious cannonade. The admiral was certainly doing his part. As he had promised, he would keep them busy at the end of the line.

Four bells in the first night watch had just struck on the 50-gun ship Sutherland, carrying the flag of Admiral Holmes, commanding the squadron of Cap-Rouge, when a boat was seen making its way through the water approaching the starboard gangway of the ship. Hails passed between the Sutherland and the approaching cutter.

"Boat ahoy!"

"The Porcupine!" promptly answered a rather small man in the stern-sheets of the boat, giving the name of the vessel he commanded and following his reply with the sharp command, "Way enough! In bow!"

As he spoke he motioned to a midshipman who sat beside him. Following his officer's direction, the helmsman put over and the boat swept gently alongside the gangway, the men unobtrusively the oars at the same time. "Leave a keeper in the boat and let the men go aboard the ship," continued the officer, rising, "then have the boat dropped astern. You will follow me on deck, Mr. Robinson." He added, as he seized the manrope and ran rapidly up the battens to the gangway.

"Good evening, Capt. Grafton," said the officer of the deck, removing his cap and bowing low to the newcomer as he stepped aboard. "The general has been asking for you."

"Ah, good evening, Hatfield! You say the general is waiting for me? Where is he?"

"In the cabin yonder, sir."

"That's well. Will you have me announced?"

"Mr. Giles," said Hatfield, turning to his midshipman, "present my compliments to the general and say that Capt. Grafton is here to see him."

"Ay, ay, sir," replied the boy, touching his cap and springing aft toward the cabin.

"This is a fine night, Hatfield," remarked Grafton, as they stood waiting.

"Indeed yes, sir."

"And a good time for our enterprise. I believe it is set finally for this evening."

"I believe so, sir. The orders have been sent around to all the ships."

"And time enough," responded Grafton. "We cannot stay in this cursed river much longer. Winter will soon be on us."

"The general's compliments to Mr. Hatfield, and will Capt. Grafton please come below in the cabin?" interrupted the midshipman.

"By the way, Hatfield," said Grafton, as he turned to follow the midshipman, "where are Capt. Rous and the admiral?"

"Below sir, in the admiral's cabin, supervising the details for the evening. Do you go with them, captain?"

"I believe that I am to have charge of the debarkation," answered Grafton heartily; "would you like to go?"

"Indeed I would, sir."

"Very well, I'll speak to Capt. Rous. I shall doubtless see you again in a few moments."

Presently Grafton entered the cabin. "Ah, Grafton, glad to see you!" said a tall, thin man seated at a table, who appeared to be very ill. "Prompt as usual. I see."

"You said nine o'clock, general, and you know we sailors can be quite as punctual as you gentlemen of the army—wind and tide permitting, of course."

"Well, captain, I—but stay! You will excuse us, Monckton, and gentlemen all, I am sure," said the general, turning to his most trusted subordinate and three or four staff officers with whom he had been in consultation. "I have something of a private nature to say to Capt. Grafton, and with your permission—no, no, keep your seats!" he added, as he sat there, "we will withdraw to the inner cabin. You see, I have two rooms, Grafton, by the courtesy of Capt. Rous, luxurious quarters for a soldier in the course of an active campaign."

The two men, bowing to the officers, who returned their salutations with elaborate courtesy, withdrew into the inner cabin. Motioning the sailor to a seat the general sank down on a transom, rested his elbow on the post-sill, leaned his head upon his hand, and gazed through the open port toward Cap-Rouge. Grafton did not presume to break the silence.

"Philip," he said at last, turning about and leaning forward toward his friend, "we try it to-night."

"Yes, James."

"And you are to have charge of the boats."

"Thank you for that."

"I wanted a good man upon whom I could depend. There must be no miscarriage here if we can help it. 'Tis our last chance. You saw Admiral Saunders, as I requested?"

"Yes, and he delays sailing for a short time longer, though he takes a great risk."

"A noble fellow!" exclaimed the young general heartily. "If he fails to take the town, I will ever bear testimony that our lack of success was not due to any lack of co-operation on his part."

"Shall we succeed, think you, Wolfe?" asked Grafton.

"What think you of the prospects yourself?"

"I am a sailor, I know little of such things. Give me the deck of a ship and I am at home. I fear nothing there—unless it be a lee-shore—but on land I prefer your views."

"Shall we fail? God knows!" murmured Wolfe softly, half soliloquizing. "I tried to turn their flank on the Montmorency and failed there. I tried a direct attack on the Beauport lines and failed again. This time I know not. The path is a poor one at best. A hundred men at the top might hold an army; suddenly, as if awakened from a dream, 'Of course not! We shall not fail! We must not fail! Philip, I must have Quebec! And now, at that! 'Tis our last chance, and mine! 'Tis sure a hard fate, but this body of mine is done for. I may last for a few days longer, but my race is about run."

"Don't say that, James!" exclaimed his boyhood friend, protesting even against the bitter assurance in his heart of the truth of the dying soldier's words.

"It isn't the saying, old friend, but the fact, that makes it hard to bear—and 'tis true. 'This poor frail body is not equal to the demands I have made upon it. If it carry me through to-night and to-morrow I shall say naught. Death may have its way. Peace, Philip. I know what you would say, but I know myself 'tis useless. I want to strike one good blow for old England before I go. I should like to see the Cross of St. George floating above Cape Diamond before—but we shall see. Stoba says the path is practicable. He's a canny Scot and should know what he's talking about. I have examined it carefully as we floated past it, and I believe that we can get up. Once let me get on those plains and I interpose between Montcalm and his base of supplies. He must fight, retreat or surrender."

"This is easy to tell," answered Grafton, "what he will do then."

"Quite. He is a splendid soldier, as many of our poor fellows have cause to know—and a fighter always. I honor him."

"But suppose you get caught between Montcalm and Bougainville's men from Cap-Rouge, Wolfe?"

"The chances for their arriving on the field together are very remote, and we must crush the one who first makes his appearance. Then we can easily deal with the other."

"Have you issued all the necessary orders?"

"All."

"Have you thought of everything?"

"Everything but defeat. The men are to enter the boats about 11 o'clock," he continued, "They are to row up the river as if to make a landing at Cap-Rouge and then return to the ships. When the tide turns and the ebb begins they are to drop silently down the river. The ships will follow after an hour's interval. The boats will land the men at the designated point, and then go across to the other side and ferry over Burton's troops, who will have marched there before this, I presume. Those are your orders, Grafton."

"What then?"

"Then we will bide the issue. 'Tis a desperate hazard."

"Ay, desperate, indeed."

"We play for a great stake, Grafton, and fortune has been so hard to us perhaps the tide may turn and luck may serve."

"You are too wise a man to be lucky, Wolfe," responded the naval officer. "Well, perhaps the luck will be with England, then. In fact, it is. Two deserters from Cap-Rouge have apprised us that a flotilla of provision boats is to be sent down to Quebec to-night. We will be there!"

"Yes," laughed Grafton, "and give the French such a breakfast as they will find it difficult to digest, I'll warrant."

"Quite so," said Wolfe, smiling. "But now that you have your official instructions, Philip, there is another thing I want you to do for me."

"Anything on earth, old friend."

"I know that, I know that," answered the soldier. "You have always been a friend to me since we were boys together in old England. No one could be truer or better than you have been."

"Oh, that's all right," answered Grafton, hastily, with the Anglo-Saxon inclination to the avoidance of a scene. "We have been friends since my father sent me to the English school, where we met. I was a little colonial lad from Massachusetts, and mightily lonely I was, Jimmie, until you took me up and championed me."

"But you fought your own battles, Phil."

"You saw that I had fair play, anyway. I'll tell you what it is, Wolfe. If your body only equalled your spirit, what a knight you would have been!"

"Well, it's about that body that I want to speak. As I told you, I am doomed. I shall never get back to England alive; the sickness upon me is mortal. The physicians have said so, and I feel that it is true. Look at me, you can see for yourself! If it were not for the fight I should be on my back now, and if I have to die I'd rather do it on the field yonder—after we have won, of course—but that's as God pleases. This is what I want you to do."

As he spoke the young general unbuttoned his waistcoat, loosened his tie, and drew from his neck a little gold chain to which was attached a golden locket inclosed in a tight leather case. He slipped the chain over his head, drew the locket from the case, opened it and held it toward the light. He looked long and earnestly at the picture it contained—the portrait of a young and lovely woman. Observing that his friend had considerably turned his head, he raised it softly to his lips. A single tear fell upon the ivory miniature as he closed the locket, slipped it back in the leather case and extended it to Grafton. Deep tribute of affection lies in the tear of a soldier—of a soldier like Wolfe.

"When you get back to England, old friend," he said, slowly, "I want you to give this to Katharine Lowther, and tell her how the night before I before the battle, I mean, I gave it to you in the cabin of the ship, and how I loved her to the end. I have sent my farwells to my mother and the rest by some who know them, but I lay this last duty upon you. Nay, nay, slip it around your neck. 'Twill not hurt Kitty, 'twill not hurt any girl to have her portrait worn against so honest a man's heart. And—" he hesitated, "don't mention this to any one, and see that it does not leave your person until you give it to her. Now, Philip, we must go. Your hand, old friend, and good-by."

"God bless you, Jim," answered Philip, his voice choking with emotion. "On my word I will tell no one of it, and no one shall see it or know it until I give it to Miss Lowther. I pledge you, old friend, but I won't say good-by. I hope to congratulate you to-morrow—in Quebec."

American Snakes.

There are only few varieties of venomous snakes in this country. The chief of them are the rattlesnake and the copperhead. In the South is to be found a variety of rattlesnake, the diamond-black, rather, and a variety of copperhead that lives around ponds and rivers, called the water moccasin. Further west, on the other side of the Mississippi river, there are several other varieties of rattlesnake.

Shannon attended the religious meetings at Ryal park, became converted, and then, feeling that he was doing wrong to sell cigars and tobacco in his store, in the presence of the Rev. Mr. King of Columbus, George Sessions and a large crowd, built a bonfire and burned hundreds of dollars' worth of the stock. He did this, he said, to show the world his attitude on the tobacco question.

BY THE BACHELOR GIRL.

A man ought to be most sober while he is getting drunk.

A man with a heart makes excellent sport for a woman without one.

Women are willing to please men a little in order to please themselves much.

Some wives possess the fatal power of making every other woman seem attractive.

If the morning after could only come the night before there would seldom be any night before.

Lots of girls don't have a good time at all while they are out until they can get home to see how they looked.

There is no safety for a stupid woman except in innocence, nor for any other sort except in scorn.

Many friends will bear your misfortunes with indifference, but few can stand your good luck without envy.

No woman can know a man well enough until she has found him out, and then she seldom cares to know him any longer.

A woman can face almost any complication in life with calmness as long as her hat pins stay in and her side elastics hold.

Many women who are careful of their pronouncements are careless of the heels of their shoes, and the worst of it is, men estimate the woman by her shoes.

A man will sit up half the night dealing out poker talk to a crowd of men and then call in his wife to put him wise when the baby asks for a drink of water in the morning.—New York Telegraph.

REFRIGERATOR HINTS.

Keep the ice compartment full of ice.

The more ice the greater the economy.

Ice-saving schemes are absurd, defeating the purpose of the refrigerator.

Overripe fruits and vegetables are a menace to the health if left in the refrigerator.

It is the food that is to be kept in the ice. Keeping ice in the sickroom or at a picnic is another matter.

If much ice be used on the table and for other purposes an authority advises a storage box for this extra ice.

It should be sponged out often with warm water in which a little soda has been dissolved, and the drain should not be neglected.

A cellar or other damp spot is no place for the refrigerator. On the other hand, it should not be put out of doors unprotected.

Should ants get into the refrigerator a saucer of tartar emetic mixed with sugar and water should be placed therein. It will drive them away.

Do not think of covering the shelves with cloth or paper any more than you do the ice. There must be good circulation, with consequent melting of ice, to preserve the food therein.

REFLECTIONS OF A BYSTANDER.

Even a flea can make an elephant uncomfortable.

Letters do not make literature; nor meter and rhyme, poetry.

Many sons of great men evidently take after their mothers.

There is a world of difference between culture and "cultyah."

Truth is large, and the man who thinks he knows it all hasn't yet been in sight of much.

A woman who longs for a "career" need have no fear that any man will hold her up for a share of it.

"Sasslety" implies a multitude of people and much buzz. Society may include but two people and silence.

Many an American huckster might marry within the Four Hundred had his great-grandfather shoveled coal for a "prince or sumpin'."

SHAKINGS FROM A HAT.

True genius is like a cat in the dark: brush it the wrong way and it emits light.

The people who say that life is not worth living are always the first ones to send for the doctor.

The fact of all thought being "old" is probably the reason why thinking has gone out of fashion.
